

Mr Busy's packed calendar

NEIGHBOURS star and former Adelaide boy Sam Clark need only check his fan sites for reassurance if he's having a bad day.

Teenage girls lurve him, but the 21-year-old, right, just hasn't the time to respond to their messages.

He hasn't even time for a girlfriend, but if the right one came along...

"If I find someone I really like, then absolutely (I'd be pleased)," he says, before adding "I'm reasonably happy at the moment."

That's because he's putting together his debut "edgy pop rock" album, working on video clips, preparing for an end-of-year trip to the UK with his band, Sam Clark and the Keeper, and of course his TV commitment is going well.

Speaking to Confidential from his car before heading to the Neighbours set yesterday, Sam mentioned there's a lot ahead for his character, Ringo Brown, and a lot ahead for himself too.

"The show keeps going and going," he says. "My character is involved in a mini-house fire ahead, but that's all I can say."

Sam is currently scoping areas out of Melbourne for his video clips and though he "definitely" wants to keep acting, his UK tour will take him away from the TV show.

It's not sure whether the move from the show will be permanent or temporary, but Sam is hoping that it's the latter.